ARTICLES ON WHAT'S HAPPENING IN ARIZONA:

Several orders have been in place modifying court operations during the pandemic to ensure that justice was provided in Arizona safely. On April 1, 2022, Chief Justice Robert Brutinel signed Administrative Order 2022-34, entitled "Resumption of Normal Operations." This effectively put an end to several orders related to the public health emergency and detailed the expectations for the courts in their transition from the modified processes. The Mesa Municipal Court is creating a domestic violence court to assist survivors and to hold abusers accountable by focusing on the most serious domestic violence cases the city sees. It will have similar goals to other specialty courts being utilized in that court, and seeks to address an increase in domestic violence related incidents. Making sure that the juveniles being held in their juvenile detention center can focus on literature and reading, Pima County has a library within their center that is part of the Pima County library branch. It functions like any other library, with books being checked out and returned. In addition, upon their departure from the facility, the juvenile has the option to take home one of six books to keep as their own. They are also promoting bonding through literacy for parents and children who are in state care. Pima County court program connects families through reading | Local news | tucson.com

In April, Yavapai's CASA for Kid Foundation's Family Visitation Center in Prescott Valley was officially renamed to the Barbara Polk Family Visitation Center in honor of a woman who dedicated her life and worked extensively with many children's organizations. She was one of the first Court Appointed Special Advocates in the state and fought fiercely to better the lives of disadvantaged youth. Her family was on hand for the dedication, proudly representing Barbara Polk. Yavapai CASA for Kids Foundation Honors Founder Barbara Polk with Building Dedication | Prescott eNews
